

A GUIDE TO A QUIETER MIND

Overthinking

Quiet the loop. Find clarity.

Understand repetitive thoughts, reduce mental noise, and respond with greater clarity.

8 chapters • 7-day reset plan • Thought reset worksheet

8 chapters to clarity.

Take them in order, at your own pace.

-
- | | | |
|----|----------------------|----------------|
| 01 | What Is Overthinking | Spot the loop. |
|----|----------------------|----------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|----------------------|------------------------|
| 02 | Notice Your Triggers | Know what sets it off. |
|----|----------------------|------------------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|------------------|-------------------------|
| 03 | Name the Thought | Thoughts are not facts. |
|----|------------------|-------------------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|----------------|------------------------|
| 04 | Calm Your Body | Settle the body first. |
|----|----------------|------------------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|----------------|-----------------------|
| 05 | Set Worry Time | Give worries a place. |
|----|----------------|-----------------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|-----------------|------------------------|
| 06 | Decide and Move | Good enough is enough. |
|----|-----------------|------------------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|------------------------|---------------------------|
| 07 | Quiet the Inner Critic | Speak to yourself kindly. |
|----|------------------------|---------------------------|
-
- | | | |
|----|-------------------------|---------------------|
| 08 | Build Clear-Mind Habits | Protect your peace. |
|----|-------------------------|---------------------|
-
- HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

Read one chapter, then try its practice. Gentle, regular practice works better than forcing your mind to be quiet.

What Is Overthinking

Spot the loop.

Two main types

- Rumination: replaying the past.
- Worry: rehearsing the future.
- Both keep you stuck and tired.

Common signs

- Replaying conversations.
- Imagining worst-case scenarios.
- Struggling to decide.
- Lying awake while your mind runs.

Why it happens

- A mind trying to protect you.
- A wish for certainty or control.
- Stress, tiredness and perfectionism.

TRY THIS

Write down the last thought loop you noticed. Was it about the past or the future?

Notice Your Triggers

Know what sets it off.

Common triggers

- Quiet moments and bedtime.
- Unanswered messages.
- Big decisions.
- Feedback and social situations.

Track the pattern

- When did it start?
- Where were you?
- What were you feeling?

Early warning signs

- A tight chest or racing heart.
- Restlessness.
- Checking your phone again and again.

TRY THIS

For 3 days, note the time, place and trigger of each thought loop.

Name the Thought

Thoughts are not facts.

Label it

- Say: “I’m having the thought that...”
- Name it: worry, regret or what-if.
- Notice it without arguing with it.

Common thinking traps

- Mind reading: assuming what others think.
- Catastrophising: expecting the worst.
- All-or-nothing: no middle ground.
- Shoulds: rigid rules for yourself.

Check the evidence

- What facts support this thought?
- What facts don’t?
- What would I tell a friend?

TRY THIS

Pick one worry. Write the evidence for it and against it.

Calm Your Body

Settle the body first.

Slow breathing

- Breathe in for 4, out for 6.
- Repeat for 2 minutes.
- Drop your shoulders and soften your jaw.

Ground yourself: 5-4-3-2-1

- 5 things you can see.
- 4 things you can feel.
- 3 things you can hear.
- 2 things you can smell.
- 1 thing you can taste.

Move a little

- Walk for 10 minutes.
- Stretch your neck and shoulders.
- Drink water. Step outside.

TRY THIS

Practise slow breathing for 2 minutes right now.

Set Worry Time

Give worries a place.

Schedule it

- Pick 15 minutes at the same time daily.
- Avoid the hour before bed.
- Set a timer.

When a worry appears

- Jot it down in one line.
- Tell yourself: “I’ll think about this at 6 pm.”
- Return to what you were doing.

During worry time

- Read your list.
- Cross out what you can’t control.
- Plan one next step for the rest.

TRY THIS

Choose your daily worry time and add it to your calendar.

Decide and Move

Good enough is enough.

Make decisions smaller

- Set a deadline.
- Limit your options to 2 or 3.
- Ask: “Will this matter in a year?”

Take the next step

- Choose the smallest action.
- Do it for just 5 minutes.
- Progress beats perfect.

Accept uncertainty

- No decision is risk-free.
- You can adjust later.
- Trust yourself to cope.

TRY THIS

Make one small decision you have been delaying. Give yourself 10 minutes.

Quiet the Inner Critic

Speak to yourself kindly.

Catch the critic

- Notice words like “always” and “never”.
- Ask: “Would I say this to a friend?”

Reframe it

- “I messed up” becomes “I’m learning”.
- “What if I fail?” becomes “What if it goes well?”
- Keep it believable, not forced.

Self-kindness

- Treat mistakes as information.
- List 3 things you handled well.
- Rest without guilt.

TRY THIS

Write a kind reply to your harshest thought this week.

Build Clear-Mind Habits

Protect your peace.

Daily basics

- Sleep at regular times.
- Move your body.
- Eat and drink regularly.

Reduce mental noise

- Limit endless scrolling and news.
- Keep a short daily to-do list.
- Take offline breaks.

Know when to get support

- Talk to someone you trust.
- Consider a counsellor or therapist if worry affects sleep, work or daily life.
- If you feel unsafe or hopeless, seek urgent help.

TRY THIS

Pick one habit to start this week and set a reminder.

YOUR RESET

7 days. 4 resets.

Clarity builds a little more each day.

DAYS 1 AND 2

Notice

- ☐ Track your triggers
- ☐ Label your thoughts

DAYS 3 AND 4

Settle

- ☐ Slow breathing daily
- ☐ Try 5-4-3-2-1

DAYS 5 AND 6

Contain

- ☐ Start worry time
- ☐ Make one small decision

DAY 7

Reflect

- ☐ What helped most?
- ☐ Choose habits to keep

REMEMBER

You can't force a quiet mind. You can practise responding to it with kindness.

Clear your head.

Use this whenever your mind feels loud.

1. Brain dump Write everything on your mind.

2a. I can influence

2b. I can't control

3. One small step What, and when?

Clear mind, one thought at a time.

This guide offers general self-help ideas, not professional advice.